Respected Sir,

Subject: Replies to your queries on the proposals submitted by the bullion industry on September 27th, 2012

Sincere thanks for taking your valuable time and engaging in a purposeful discussion with the core committee members of the Indian bullion industry on September 27th, 2012 at your office.

Sir, you had raised two questions during the meeting. We have attempted to discuss these three issues in the following pages. Hope the replies meet with the requirement.

The Indian bullion and jewellery industry looks forward to your support and cooperation for growth and development.

Thanking you,

Sincerely yours,

S K Jindal

Replies to questions raised by Shri Sumit Bose, Revenue Secretary, Ministry of Finance, Government of India during the meeting on September 27, 2012

1. Is it viable to export gold bullion from India, given that India is the largest importer of gold bullion? How many instances were there in the recent past during which it was competitive to export bullion from India?

Ans: In India gold bullion purchases have seasonality. There are certain periods in a year when demand for gold in India declines. During such times, there is a strong possibility that Indian gold bullion might trade at a discount to international prices. Secondly, it is seen that sudden and disruptive changes in Indian rupee also may create opportunities for exporting gold bullion.

To evaluate the number of occasions Indian gold was attractively priced vis-à-vis international gold prices, MCX spot gold prices (ex-Ahmedabad) was compared with the London AM Fix prices expressed in Indian rupees (by taking the RBI reference rate). It was also assumed that upon export of bullion, the exporter would get a duty drawback at the specified rate.

Description of the variables:

London AM fix = London AM Fix (.995 fineness) in Rs./troy ounce (source: LBMA and RBI for currency rate)

MCX Spot Gold = Ex-Ahmedabad, inclusive of all taxes and levies relating to import duty, customs, but excluding sales tax and VAT and any other additional tax or surcharge on sales tax, local taxes and octroi) .995 fineness in Rs/troy ounce

Duty Drawback from 27-Nov-2009 till 20-sept-2010 = Rs. 20.60/gm of net gold content

Duty Drawback from 21-sept-2010 till date= Rs. 30.90/gm of net gold content

Methodology:

$$\text{Net export realisation} = \frac{\{\text{London AM Fix} - \text{MCX Spot Gold price} + \text{Duty drawback} * 98\%}{\text{MCX spot gold price}}$$

In the above calculation, VAT and other local taxes are not considered as they vary from state to state and from time to time. However, in real world these are applicable. Besides, these are non-refundable.

To overcome the effect, we have put a filter of 1% (being the average VAT on gold bullion) and considered only those cases where the net export realisation is in excess of 1%. Working sheet presented in the annexure-1.

Case-1: Refund of 98% duty drawback

Summary
Period	01-01-2010 till 28-09-2012
No. of business days	716
No. of days MCX Spot Gold price was more than 1% discount to WGC gold price	20
No. of days MCX Spot Gold price was more than 2% discount to WGC gold price	5
No. of days MCX Spot Gold price was more than 3% discount to WGC gold price	2

Case-2: If refund is aligned with the import duty

On January 16th, 2012, the import duty on gold bullion was changed from weight basis to value basis. Currently, it is at 4% of the value of gold. Periodically, tariff value of gold is announced. Let's us take September 28, 2012 as an example. The tariff value of gold (USD/10gm) and USDINR reference rate on that date were 573 and 54.75 respectively. This works out to an import duty of Rs. 1028 per 10 gm (@4.12%). As against this, under the present duty draw back scheme, exporters are eligible for a refund of only Rs. 309/10 gm. (refer to annexure-1).

The difference between current duty drawback scheme and the import duty equivalent drawback in this case is a substantial Rs. 719/10 gm, which is about 2% of the value of gold.

Thus, if duty drawback rates are aligned with the import duty, then export possibilities would increase significantly.

Conclusions:

1. Export of bullion from India is feasible during periods of dull demand in India and also during periods when currency volatility is very high.
2. Export of bullion can be greatly enhanced if duty drawback rates are aligned to the import duty rates. The drawback on export of gold bullion would be the customs duty applicable on the date of export, and is subject to the export realisation at the London PM Fix for gold on the working day immediately prior to the date of export. The drawback may also be made available in the nature of a Credit which can be used for future imports or import of any other dutiable goods into the country. There will not be any payout from the government on account of this.
3. We estimate that India has accumulated over 12000 tonnes of gold bullion during the past 15 years at an average price of USD600/ ounce. Thus, the current price level of USD 1750/troy ounce is very attractive to many of the investors. Liberalising exports could potentially bring foreign exchange to the tune of USD 3 – 5 billion per year (on the assumption that 60 – 100 tonnes could be exported).

2. Elaborate the process of “gold certificate or gold savings scheme”. Specifically, how will the bank cover the risks arising out of gold prices without buying gold? How will banks generate income to service such products?

Gold savings scheme or gold certificate scheme:

Essentially, these are gold denominated financial products offered by regulated market participants such as banks and financial institutions (along with their channel partners) through regulated exchange market place (for secondary market transactions and liquidity) that yield returns similar to returns from gold bullion.

Need for gold savings scheme or gold certificate scheme:

1. Indian investment demand in gold bullion is estimated at 30% of annual demand. This is roughly about 200 tonnes a year. Currently, bulk of the investment demand is in the form of bars and coins. This puts a direct pressure on the demand for physical metal imports.
2. Gold ETFs, though a very good financial product proposition, has only 30 tonnes under management till date. With 14 AMCs and 500,000 investors, Gold ETFs penetration is still urban-centric.
3. Gold Mining Funds of some AMCs have not done that well in mobilising savings as their performance do not directly correlate with the performance of gold.
4. Thus, in the current market, there is a need for a simple bullion-based financial product that can be made accessible to all investors across the country. Gold savings scheme or gold certificate scheme fits in this category.

Typically, Gold certificate scheme or gold savings scheme has three phases.

1. Issuance
2. Liability and gold price exposure Management
3. Redemption

1. Issuing phase:

Typical gold savings schemes involve accepting deposits from resident Indian in Indian rupees and converting the amount into equivalent gramme of gold (995 pure). Thus, the account is maintained in grammes of gold basis (metal account). Usually, these deposits have a minimum lock-in period of one year. After the minimum lock-in period, the depositor is allowed to encash the gold held by him in Indian rupees at the then prevailing gold price. Since these deposits are similar to Fixed Deposits, by design, it is neither transferrable nor negotiable. However, negotiability or transferability can be facilitated if the product is launched as Gold Certificates or Gold Bonds. Further, Certificates or bonds can also be listed in the secondary market rendering liquidity and exit options to investors.

Banks (public and private sector banks) together manage more than five crore savings bank accounts and reach every nook and corner of the country. With such a vast reach, a simple financial product proposition would meet with better success.

2. Liability and Gold Price Exposure Management :

The promoter of gold saving scheme has to generate returns that track the returns from gold. Banks can manage this by doing the following.

- a. Statutory allocation of 5% for CRR on which there is no return
- b. Statutory allocation 23% for SLR on which there is a return of about 7-8% pa.
- c. Allocate about 25% to cover gold price exposures in forward market. Currently, banks are allowed to use overseas markets. They should also be allowed to cover the exposure in gold in domestic markets.
- d. Deploy the remaining 48% in generating income which would cover expenses involved in forward cover (3-4% including covering of forex risks in case of overseas markets; 4-5% in case risks are covered using domestic exchanges as it would involve more roll-overs), cost of servicing customers and banks margins.

As can be seen, the scheme does not envisage creation of physical stock of gold yet generate an income profile that track return on gold. Thus, by design, the scheme, is designed to take the pressure out-of physical gold.

3. Redemption:

After the minimum lock-in period of one year, the scheme is open for redemption. On redemption the number of grammes of gold held will be converted to rupees by taking the then prevailing value of gold and the amount will be paid in Indian rupees.

Thus, for the saver, the gold savings scheme would act as a perfect financial product that she could keep investing in and redeem only when there is a need for consumption.

Risk factors:

1. Should the price of gold in Indian rupees decline steeply, then investors might not invest in the scheme.

Availability of instruments such as 'forwards', 'futures' and 'options' can mitigate this risk to a great extent. Options contracts have asymmetric risk-return profile. As a result, a call option allows a buyer to participate in the upside price movement, while limiting the loss should the market decline. This could address the issue of steep decline in gold prices both from the savers perspective as well as banker's perspective.

2. Liquidity risks

Gold market is the most liquid market in the world. Even in the domestic market conditions the markets are highly liquid. It is envisaged that banks can manage the liquidity pressure by streamlining redemption sequences, splitting exposure across multiple markets and generating regular income from the surplus deployable funds. Banks are better placed to manage liquidity risks arising out of extreme fluctuations in gold prices.
